STUDENT HOSTEL REGULATIONS

1. INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

The social life in student hostels constitutes an important part of the learning experience on campus. Hostel life provides students with opportunities to interact with each other in a group setting, through which respect, cooperation and sense of responsibility can be developed. The hostel environment can also help students to discover their talents, increase their emotional maturity, and acquire social skills.

All residents of student hostels are members of the hostel community; as such, they should actively participate in hostel functions and help to promote an ideal hostel environment.

The major objective of these student hostel regulations is to safeguard the collective interest of all residents, so that a comfortable environment conducive to both physical and mental well-being can be maintained. All residents are expected to comply with these regulations.
